Translating Your Experience for Your Resume:

- We know you have a big challenge in writing your resume. After all, most civilians don't understand the acronyms and slang of the military or what your duties really entailed.
- To help you make your resume stand out no matter who is reading it, we'll help you describe your experience, highlighting your transferrable skills and leadership.
- Make an appointment to visit with one of our friendly career specialists to get started.

Plan for Your Next Career:

1. Make an appointment with a career specialist to explore career paths, identify skills and strengths from your military experience, and go over job search strategies.
2. Participate in an informational interview or job shadowing experience with employers in your field.
3. Write a civilian-friendly resume and cover letter that effectively communicate your experience and transferrable skills.
4. Pursue student employment and/or an internship to try out different work environments and begin networking.
5. Build your network of fellow veterans, employers, and career professionals.
